Beauty Without Cruelty's (BWC) character, Reggie McVeggie was present at the Stellenberg NG church to offer tasty chicken-friendly nuggets, at the vleis-fees on Friday September 12. Passers-by were given recipe cards and information on kinder choices, by BWC and 269Life. "Our obsession with so much meat, at every meal, is costing us the earth," said Toni Brockhoven, spokesperson for BWC. "We are here to show that people can eat tasty choices, even on a braai, that is GMO, antibiotic and suffering free. Starting with making changes even just one day a week has an overall significant impact on how much water is used, how much pollution is caused, how much grain is diverted from feeding humans, and animal suffering, all caused by the meat industry." Ms Brockhoven added that BWC is against the exploitation of all animals for human pleasure, profit and palate.

Media Village Productions in Durbanville clinched eight awards at the 168 Film Festival held in Los Angeles on Saturday September 14. Their film Tula Tula caught the attention of an international audience at the Aratani Theatre at the weekend. Shane Vermooten was awarded best director for Tula Tula. In 2013 he was also awarded best director at the same festival. "Media Village Productions hopes to raise funding so these short films can be expanded into feature films," said Graham Vermooten, CEO of the company. "It is evident we have stories that are able to capture the attention of our audience, and that our team has great creative ability so it is time to showcase this winning combination in a feature," Mr Vermooten said. From left, Chris van der Burgh, the director of photography and editor; Greg Kriek, actor; Shane Vermooten, director; Bianca Schmitz, make-up artist, and Diane Vermooten, producer and scriptwriter.

Tygerberg Hospital is trying to find the families of two confused patients. Thandiwe Joy Mfeka, 60, top, was admitted on Wednesday September 3. The other patient, Doreen Mthembu, is 60.
